Nils Petermann Alliance to Save Energy

Nils coordinates the Alliance to Save Energy's promotion of energy-efficient fenestration, working together with the University of Minnesota, AZS Consulting and partnering with LBNL in the Efficient Windows Collaborative.

When he joined the Alliance to Save Energy in 2005, Nils moved to Washington DC from Germany, where he had graduated from Frankfurt University with a Magister (M.A.) in American Studies and International Politics with a focus on U.S. environmental policy.

At the Alliance to Save Energy, Nils has worked for a number of projects in addition to the Efficient Windows Collaborative, including work for the Federal Energy Management Program, the Building Codes Assistance Project, the Presidential Climate Action Plan, and others. Nils' tasks have included analysis and promotion of energy efficiency issues ranging from fenestration and sustainable building standards to utility programs and international cooperation. Nils has represented the Alliance at the NFRC since the summer of 2006.

Nils lives in Washington DC, where he enjoys becoming acquainted to new languages and sports, including Chinese, a plethora of acronyms, and American football.
